Historic overview

- A landmark project undertaken by Elsevier between 1991 and 1995, together with eight universities, investigated ways to create a digital library that could make the fulfillment of those needs a reality.
- More than four years later, the investment in resources, technology and testing came to light as ScienceDirect was launched.
- Today, ScienceDirect continues to take the lead, thanks to the quality of the published research, the commitment of people around the world, and the advancements in technology.
- Number of scientists that have simultaneous access to ScienceDirect: 10 million.

THE LANCET.

VOL. I.—No. 1.] LONDON, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1823. [Price 6d.

P R E F A C E.

It has long been a subject of surprise and regret, that in this extensive and intelligent community there has not hitherto existed a work that would convey to the Public, and to distant Practitioners as well as to Students in Medicine and Surgery, reports of the Metropolitan Hospital Lectures.

Having for a considerable time past observed the great and increasing inquiries for such information, in a department of science so pre-eminently useful, we have been induced to offer to public notice a work calculated, as we conceive, to supply in the most ample manner, whatever is valuable in these important branches of knowledge ;—and as the Lectures of Sir Astley Cooper, on the theory and practice of Surgery, are probably the best of the kind delivered in Europe, we have commenced our undertaking with the introductory Address of that distinguished professor, given in the theatre of St. Thomas's Hospital on Wednesday evening last. The Course will be rendered complete in subsequent Numbers.

In addition to Lectures, we purpose giving under the head, Medical and Surgical Intelligence, a correct description of all the important Cases that may occur, whether in England or on any part of the civilized Continent.

ELSEVIER

these are necessary, and we content ourselves by merely showing in what directions their utility will be most active? To the Medical and Surgical Practitioners of this city, whose avocations prevent their personal attendance at the Hospitals—To Country Practitioners, whose remoteness from the head quarters, as it were, of scientific knowledge, leaves them almost without the means of ascertaining its progress—To the numerous classes of Students, whether here or in distant universities—To Colonial Practitioners—And finally, to every individual in these realms. Consequently, we shall exclude from our pages the unobtainable phraseology of the Schools, and adopt as its substitute, plain English diction. In this attempt, we are well aware that we shall be assailed by such unavailing opposition. But, notwithstanding this, we will fearlessly discharge our duty. We hope the spirit of "Stream Debitus" has passed, and that mystery and concealment will no longer be encouraged. Indeed, we trust that mystery and ignorance will shortly be considered synonymous. Ceremonies, and signs, have now lost their charms; Neuroptics, and gilded apparatus, their power to deceive. But for these, it would have been impossible to imagine how it has happened that medical and surgical knowledge, of all others the most calculated to benefit Man, should have been by him the most neglected. He studies with the greatest attention and anxiety the constitutions of his horses and his dogs, and learns all their peculiarities; whilst of the nature of his own and learns all their peculiarities, and equally unskilled as regards his infant offspring. Yet, a little reflection and application would enable him to exert, even from himself and family half the advantages, his acquirements affect society; and in addition to these advantages, his acquirements in Medical learning would furnish him with a test by which he could detect and expose the impostures of ignorant practitioners.

In conclusion—we respectfully observe, that our Colonies will not be restricted to Medical ignorance, but on the contrary we shall be indebted to our exertions to render "THE LANCET" a complete Chronicle of current Literature.

SURGICAL LECTURES.

Theatre, St. Thomas's Hospital,
WINDMILL SQUARE,
Oct. 1, 1823.

As half-past seven this Theatre was crowded in every part, by upwards of four hundred Students, of the most respectable description; in fact we never before witnessed so grand a surgical class: the sight was most pleasing, for they all appeared gentlemen of cultivated manners and good education.

About eight o'clock, Sir ARTHUR COCKERILL arrived, and was received with the most enthusiastic applause; when it had ceased, this distinguished Professor commenced his discourse by observing,—That, while it is the province of the Physician to attend to internal diseases, it is the duty of the Surgeon to attend to those that are external; to perform operations for the removal of diseased parts; and to know how to regulate the system by the use of medicine, when local diseases are produced by constitutional derangement. Surgery is usually divided into the Principles and Practice. The first are learned from observations on the living when diseased, by dissection of the dead, and by experiments made on living animals. Our inductions from these sources, furnish us with the means of knowing a malady by its symptoms, the alteration of structure in a part when diseased, and the various ways in which Nature attempts the reparative process, both in external and internal parts. A man who has seen much of morbid preparations, possesses great advantages; but his knowledge cannot be perfect unless he has frequently seen the subject under dissection, in which he must himself have assisted. In the surgical sciences hypothesis should be entirely discarded. And sound theory, derived from actual observations and experience, alone encouraged. The first is an ignis fatuus that is sure to mislead; the last a polar star, a never-failing guide. Experiments on living animals have been found of the greatest utility in directing us to a knowledge of the means by which Nature acts in the reparation of injuries, and in the restoration of lost parts. Thus the method she would adopt in uniting a fracture in the bone of a dog, will show you the manner in which union would happen in the fracture of a

Redesign: our vision

- accelerate time-to-results
- enable improved customization
- reduce need to repeat searches
- help users better focus on task at hand
- integrate more easily into digital library environment
- empower users to save time, be more efficient and more productive

Phase 1: New features August 2006

1. Redesigned browse
 - homepage, browse page and journal/book homepages now guide users more easily and quicker to content
2. Personalization all personalized settings available from the homepage
 - recent actions of a user are stored and accessible from the homepage
 - user is able to add own favorite quick links
 - remember me option to log user in automatically
3. Quick Search now serves the 4 most frequent user tasks from every page
 - finding (new) articles in a familiar subject field
 - finding author-related information
 - getting an overview of a new subject field
 - finding a specific article

- Provides flexibility of full Boolean searching
- Allows the use of:
 - Truncation or wildcard characters
 - Proximity connectors
 - Qualification to any data field

Search Mode: Advance (cont')

- Includes journal Articles in Press
- Uses Boolean connectors and LexisNexis search syntax
- Handles complex and lengthy search strings

The screenshot shows a search interface with several tabs: 'All Sources', 'Journals', 'Abstract Databases', 'Books', 'Reference Works', and 'Scirus'. The 'Journals' tab is selected. Below the tabs, there is a search box labeled 'Term(s):' containing the text 'title(dolly) and journal-name(Lancet)'. This search box is circled in orange. To the right of the search box, there is a vertical button labeled 'Advanced', also circled in orange. Below the search box, there is a 'Source:' dropdown menu set to 'All journals' and a checked checkbox for 'Include Articles in Press'. Below that, there is a 'Subject:' dropdown menu with a list of categories: '- All Sciences -', 'Agricultural and Biological Sciences', 'Arts and Humanities', and 'Biochemistry, Genetics and Molecular Bi...'. A text box at the bottom of the subject menu reads 'Hold down the Ctrl key (or ⌘ key) to select multiple entries.' An orange-bordered text box is overlaid on the bottom right of the search interface, containing the text: 'Advanced Search term box accommodates complex strings'.

Search Syntax (1)

Data Field Qualification

- Used to limit searches to specific fields:
 - Type the field name with the search term in parentheses
- eg. keywords(neurotoxin)
 - Searchable bibliographic elements include:
 - authors, title, journal name, abstract, keywords, references, full text, etc.
- Omitting a field name, searches all fields of the database

Search Syntax (2)

Boolean Operators:

AND • OR • NOT

'A' NOT 'B' : A

eg. Asia NOT China

'A' AND 'B' : AB

eg. Intel AND Processors

'A' OR 'B' : A, B, AB

eg. Malaysia OR Thailand

Search Syntax (3)

Wildcard Characters (Truncation)

- Used for variant spelling of search terms
 - including suffixes:
- 1) ! finds a root word plus all the words made by adding letters to the end of it
 - behav! finds behave, behavioral, behaviour, etc.
- 2)  replaces a character anywhere in a word, except the first character
 - womn finds woman and women
 - cannot use esophagus
- Use  to hold a space for variations in spelling
 - sulur finds sulphur and sulfur

Search Syntax (4)

Proximity Connectors

- Used to specify how close search terms can be to each other in a phrase, in the same sentence, or in the same paragraph:
 - 1) W/nn used to specify the number of words between search terms:
 - w represents within
 - nn represents a number from 1 – 255
 - eg. pain W/5 morphine
 - Does not specify word order
 - finds pain being treated by morphine
 - and morphine being used to treat pain

Search Syntax (4)

- 2) PRE/nn finds two words where the first word must precede the second by a specified number words
 - eg. neonatal PRE/3 screening
 - Does specify word order
 - finds neonatal and paediatric screening
 - but not screening in neonatal clinics
- 3) W/SEG finds words that appear in the same (title, keywords, references, etc.)
 - eg. lesion W/SEG pancreatic
 - Of limited use in ScienceDirect
 - useful if searching full text and/or free text
 - prefer searching specific fields

Community perceptions of environmental and social change and tourism development on the island of Koh Samui, Thailand

Ray Green

Faculty of Architecture, Building and Planning, University of Melbourne, Parkville, VIC 3010, Australia

Available online 26 April 2005.

Abstract

This study explored how members of a small town community on the island of Koh Samui, Thailand, perceive their everyday surroundings within the context of an environment that has rapidly changed, primarily due to tourism and associated development. Initially, a projective mapping technique was employed to identify a range of local environmental settings: from those that have most dramatically changed to those that have remained relatively unchanged. These settings were
